

JUNIOR CEO ACADEMY

Founding Families • Beta Participation & Privacy Notice

DRAFT FOR PARENTS • This notice explains the free pilot and the information handled by the current test website.

FREE	14 DAYS	AGES 13–15
No payment	Suggested pilot	Initial test group

1 What your family is joining

Junior CEO Academy is inviting a small group of families to try its first three interactive entrepreneurship lessons: Money Detective, Problem Hunter, and Customer Detective. The goal is to learn whether teens can follow the lessons independently and whether the course is clear, engaging, and useful. This is an early, free educational pilot—not an accredited school program, a paid enrollment, or a promise of business earnings.

2 What participation means

- Parent coordinates participation. A parent or legal guardian decides whether their 13–15-year-old takes part, receives the website link, and is available for assistance with safety or technical problems. Students should attempt learning activities independently.
- Voluntary and free. Your family may skip questions, stop using the pilot, or withdraw at any time. No purchase is required. Completing the beta does not automatically enroll you in a future paid course.
- Use pretend information. Use imaginary names, businesses, prices, and customer examples. Do not enter real customer details, the student's full name, home address, school, contact information, photos, or other sensitive information.
- No real selling required. Your child does not need to spend money, contact strangers, conduct unsupervised interviews, sell products, or meet anyone in person. A fictional customer interview is acceptable.
- Feedback is from adults. We may ask the parent to submit observations about navigation, learning, engagement, and course value through the website's parent feedback form. Please omit identifying child details.
- Technology is a prototype. The site may contain mistakes or technical issues. Work is saved to this browser, not an online student account. Using another device, clearing browser storage, or using private browsing could cause progress loss.

3 What this agreement does not do

This is a participation acknowledgment, not a waiver of a child's legal rights, permission to publish a child's image or story, or a substitute for any legally required verifiable parental consent. The first pilot should remain ages 13–15 until the under-13 privacy review is complete.

4 Beta privacy information

This section describes the current beta setup. It must be reviewed and updated if the website, analytics, forms, hosting, or student accounts change.

What information is involved

- Parent application (Google Forms, if used). The signup form may collect the parent/guardian's name, email, general student age range, and answers about interest in the pilot. Do not include a child's name or direct contact details.
- Parent feedback (Netlify Forms). After testing, a parent can optionally enter a beta family code, the number of missions completed, ratings, and written comments. The site sends those answers to the operator's Netlify Forms account.
- Student lesson progress (in-browser storage). Quiz selections, written practice answers, reflections, and completion status are saved locally in the browser on the family's device. They are not intentionally submitted through the feedback form or synced to a student account. Downloaded backups stay wherever the family saves them.
- Technical information. Website and form providers may process operational data such as IP address, browser/device information, and request logs to deliver and protect their services. Do not assume the site is fully anonymous.

How information is used

We use parent contact and feedback information to select participants, send test instructions, respond to questions, identify issues, and improve the beta. We do not ask for student photos, school records, student email addresses, or payment information as part of this pilot. We will not publish identifying family feedback or use testimonials without separate permission.

Service providers

The current website is hosted by Netlify, and parent feedback is handled by Netlify Forms. Parent applications may be collected using Google Forms. These providers process information to deliver their services and have their own privacy terms. Do not submit confidential or sensitive information in either form.

Retention, withdrawal and contact

We will keep parent beta application and feedback information only as long as reasonably needed for testing and follow-up. Parent application and beta feedback records will be deleted within 90 days after the pilot ends, unless longer retention is required by law or needed to resolve a pending request. If a parent separately opts in to future launch updates, the contact email will be retained for those messages until they opt out or request deletion. Families can request access, correction, or deletion of parent-submitted information, or withdraw from the pilot, by contacting: J.ceoacademy@gmail.com. Local lesson data can be removed by clearing this website's browser storage; the family controls any downloaded backups.

If the pilot includes under-13 students or begins collecting their personal information, additional privacy disclosures and, where applicable, verifiable parental consent may be legally required before collection.
